LEH: The Central Institute of Buddhist Studies (CIBS), a deemed-to-be university at Choglamsar, celebrated its 67th Foundation Day on Friday, highlighting its academic achievements, research activities and role in preserving Buddhist philosophy, culture and Himalayan languages.

The programme was held at the institute's Arya Nagarjuna Auditorium, with His Eminence Skabje Choegon Rinpoche attending as the chief guest. Ladakh Buddhist Association President Chering Dorje Lakrok and Ladakh Gonpa Association President Venerable Dorjay Stanzin were the guests of honour.

CIBS Vice-Chancellor Professor Rajesh Ranjan presented the annual progress report, outlining the university's academic achievements, research publications, infrastructure development and institutional initiatives over the past academic year.

Addressing the gathering, Choegon Rinpoche commended the institute's contribution to education and socio-cultural life across Ladakh and the wider trans-Himalayan region. He urged students to combine academic diligence with ethical conduct and pursue learning in ways that contribute to society.

Lakrok praised the Vice-Chancellor's efforts and said the institute's development reflected its academic leadership and institutional progress.

The celebration also recognised student achievements across academics, sports and athletics, the National Cadet Corps (NCC), and co-curricular competitions, including debates, lectures, quizzes and poetry recitations. The chief guest and guests of honour jointly presented prizes, merit certificates and awards to outstanding students.

Students also presented a cultural programme showcasing Ladakh's heritage, adding a traditional dimension to the anniversary celebrations.

The programme began with a welcome address by coordinator Dr Thinless Yangjor and concluded with a vote of thanks by Deputy Registrar Dr Tsering Choldan, who acknowledged the contributions of dignitaries, faculty members, students, organisers and supporters.

The foundation day marked nearly seven decades of the institute's work in Buddhist studies and the preservation and dissemination of the region's cultural and linguistic heritage.

University of Ladakh organises Snow Leopard workshop, explores AI in Wildlife conservation

EARTH NEWS SERVICE

KARGIL: The University of Ladakh's Kargil Campus has organised a two-day workshop on snow leopard conservation, bringing together students, wildlife experts and educators to explore habitat protection, human-wildlife coexistence and the use of artificial intelligence in wildlife monitoring.

Organised by the Department of Zoology in collaboration with WWF-India's WHL initiative, the workshop titled "Snow Leopard in the Trans-Himalaya: Challenges, Opportunities and Future Perspectives" was held on October 22 and 23 to mark International Snow Leopard Day 2026.

Around 80 students from the Departments of Zoology, Life Science and Forensic Science, along with students from six higher secondary schools, participated in the second day's programme, which featured expert lectures, a poster exhibition and a presentation competition.

The first day included a field visit to Sangrah Ridge, attended by 20 students, three faculty members and field experts from WWF-India's WHL initiative. The visit offered practical exposure to snow leopard habitats and wildlife field signs, highlighting the role of field-based learning in conservation research.

Preet Sharma, Senior Project Officer, WHL-WWF India, delivered a technical lecture on safeguarding the shared future of snow leopards and people in Asia's high-mountain rangelands. He highlighted habitat conservation, community participation and coexistence between local communities and wildlife.

Dr Mehboob Ali, In-Charge Administration at the Kargil Campus, spoke on the application of artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning (ML) in wildlife conservation, outlining their potential in research, monitoring and conservation management.

A poster exhibition and presentation competition featured 15 posters on snow leopard ecology, giving students a platform to demonstrate their scientific understanding and communication skills.

Wildlife Warden Kargil Ankit Sinha, IFS, attended the valedictory session as chief guest and distributed certificates to participants. Dr Ali presented an overview of the workshop, while WHL-WWF India Project Officer Mohd Kazim delivered the vote of thanks. The technical sessions were moderated by Dr Ahsan Ali of the Department of Zoology.

The workshop was supported by WWF-India's WHL initiative and Dr Ali, principal investigator of an AI- and IoT-based project aimed at protecting livestock-dependent communities and supporting snow leopard conservation in Ladakh. The project is funded under the Tribal Area Sub Plan scheme of IBITF.

The programme highlighted the role of scientific research, emerging technology and community participation in protecting snow leopards and their fragile Trans-Himalayan habitat.
